April 13, 2006 – When the Transit Authority of Northern Kentucky wanted to make their bus passes available to residents and employees throughout the service area, they turned to U.S. Bank as a natural partner. As a community-minded banking institution and the 6th largest financial holding company in the United States, U.S. Bank was quick to agree to become a sales outlet for TANK bus fare as a continuation of their commitment to downtown Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky.

“Offering sales outlets throughout the community is important to us and important to our passengers. Making riding the bus convenient and easy is one of our goals. U.S. Bank has given us an opportunity to reach more of Northern Kentucky and give our passengers in nearly every community we serve a nearby location to purchase their bus fare,” stated David Malone, TANK’s General Manager. “And hopefully, having bus passes in each branch will give U.S. Bank the opportunity to turn some of our customers into U.S. Bank customers.”

“We are thrilled to partner with TANK and happy to provide this service to their current and future customers,” said Dave Smith, U.S. Bank Government Banking Division.

TANK offers a monthly pass, valid for unlimited rides for one calendar month, for $45. In addition, passengers can purchase a 10-ride book of tickets for $11.25.
